Shared equity is currently being explored as a mechanism to make homeownership more accessible to Canadians. Shared equity providers act as co-investor, purchasing a share in the future value of a home. Shared equity allows the homeowner to put a 20% down payment on a home purchase thus saving fees and reducing their monthly mortgage payments. This also allows Canadians to purchase homes over a million dollars, which legally requires a 20% down payment.

The percentage of the down payment that each party contributes translates into the percentage of equity in the home. This determines how the home's appreciation is shared when it is sold. So, if a homeowner contributes 25% of the down payment and the shared equity investor contributes 75%, the homeowner will receive 25% of the home's available equity. When the home is sold, the person who lives in the home gets their mortgage principal payments back, then the remaining equity is split with the homeowner receiving 25% of the equity and the shared equity in

Shared equity is currently being explored as a mechanism to make homeownership more accessible to Canadians. Shared equity providers are paid to manage pools of funds for real estate investors who would rather partner with a homeowner than be a landlord. Shared equity providers' investments grow when homeowners' houses appreciate. If the homes appreciate in value, the shared equity provider distributes the returns to investors.

Shared equity is currently being explored as a mechanism to make homeownership more accessible to Canadians. Shared equity providers act as co-investor, purchasing a share in the future value of a home. Shared equity allows the homeowner to put a 20% down payment on a home purchase thus saving fees and reducing their monthly mortgage payments. This also allows Canadians to purchase homes over a million dollars, which legally requires a 20% down payment. The percentage of the down payment that each party contributes translates into the percentage of equity in the home. This determines how the home's appreciation is shared when it is sold. So, if a homeowner contributes 25% of the down payment and the shared equity investor contributes 75%, the homeowner will receive 25% of the home's available equity. When the home is sold, the person who lives in the home gets their mortgage principal payments back, then the remaining equity is split with the homeowner receiving 25% of the equity and the shared equity in	475	1	1	1.00	.000

Shared equity is currently being explored as a mechanism to make homeownership more accessible to Canadians. Shared equity providers are paid to manage pools of funds for real estate investors who would rather partner with a homeowner than be a landlord. Shared equity providers' investments grow when homeowners' houses appreciate. If the homes appreciate in value, the shared equity provider distributes the returns to investors.  Now that you have learned a bit more about shared equity, we would like you to re-consider if you strongly agree, agree, disagree, or strongly disagree with each of the following statements.	475	1	1	1.00	.000
